Leak of Athletic Report Brings Swift Repudiation

by William Steinhardt, '50

Premature release of recommendations on intercollegiate athletics which conveyed the impression that approval had been given to a Student Life Task Force committee report calling for gradual phasing out of varsity sports at Ohio University brought swift efforts to correct the facts.

Information unofficially passed on to some of the media April 20 indicated the recommendations would reduce the athletic program, except for basketball, to a club or intramural basis. In addition to basketball, other intercollegiate competition at the University includes football, baseball, track and field, swimming, tennis, hockey, wrestling, soccer and golf.

A statement issued immediately by President Claude R. Sowle explained he had not yet seen the text of the recommendation which was one part of a comprehensive review of University procedures and policies initiated at his request last fall.

"The Student Life Task Force is one of six such study committees which have been asked to prepare recommendations in a number of areas to be submitted to a Task Force Steering Committee," President Sowle's statement said.

The statement emphasized that before any final decisions were to be made, a long and deliberate process would be involved that could take several months. For example, the statement said that upon receipt of the steering committee report, the review process would involve the Faculty Senate, the President's Advisory Council, the Student Assembly, the Graduate Student Advisory Council and the Senior Administrators.

When the review as to desirability and feasibility is complete, President Sowle, in his statement, said, "I will determine which of the recommendations I should evaluate and act upon and which should be transmitted to the Board of Trustees for their judgment."

Release of the recommendations came shortly after a poll which indicated 64 percent of a representative sampling of students, faculty members and administrators favor maintaining the current athletic program. The task force, chaired by Dr. Anthony G. Trisolini, professor of comparative arts, was composed of three faculty members, four undergraduate students, a graduate student and one administrator.

Expressions of support for intercollegiate sports came from alumni as well as from some of the trustees and administrators. Mail and phone calls from graduates across the country were reported to be heavily in favor of the athletic program.

One trustee source was quoted by the Associated Press as saying, "There will be little change in our intercollegiate program. It will stay about the same."

In a statement, Bill Rohr, University athletic director, concluded with a personal opinion that "intercollegiate athletics will remain an integral part of the Ohio University program."

President Sowle, during the Green and White Club's annual recognition banquet April 30, in brief remarks said, "I welcome this opportunity to thank you from the bottom of my heart for your faithful and

BULLETIN: University Closed Until June

An announcement was issued at 3 a.m. Friday, May 15, from the President's Office, that Ohio University would close immediately and remain closed until the beginning of the summer quarter June 22. All students were directed to leave the campus as quickly as possible. They were informed they would receive by mail information concerning options available with respect to grades and credit.

The decision to close was made following two consecutive nights of confrontation between a small, belligerent, brick-throwing mob and law-enforcement officers trying to disperse the group from city property with tear gas.

President Claude R. Sowle in his announcement said, "It is sad indeed that this inspiring period in the history of Ohio University must end in such an unfortunate way. The result, however, in no way detracts from the magnificent efforts of the great majority of our faculty, students and staff to keep the University open. We tried, but we failed."

"We must now turn our attention to the future in the hope that we can find solutions to the perplexing problems that have caused us to reach this decision this morning."

One week later, President Sowle announced the cancelling of Commencement exercises, originally scheduled for June 14. He said he based his decision solely on considerations of safety and security, adding it would be "irresponsible for the University, during this tense and uncertain period, to sponsor any event that would bring thousands of persons to the campus."

Graduate students who wished to complete their spring quarter work were allowed to return to campus beginning May 22. Other graduate students had the option of completing course work by mail or by special arrangements with their professors.

Further details of the events and circumstances leading to the University closing will be forwarded to alumni as soon as possible.

Communication Week Opens

by Dru Riley Evans '51

The third annual Communication Week, involving several Ohio University alumni, drew 11 prominent personalities to the Athens campus from May 4 to 8 at a time when more than 400 other universities and colleges across the country already had announced their plans to close down.

The tense week, triggered by state and national reaction to both President Richard M. Nixon's announcement on Cambodia and to the shooting fatalities of four students at Kent State University, was climaxed first by a noon-time address May 8 by ABC news commentator Howard K. Smith to a packed Memorial Auditorium audience and later that evening by the presence of President Claude R. Sowle in the American Broadcasting Co.'s Washington, D.C., studio.

President Sowle was invited to be on a panel to represent higher education's reaction to President Nixon's press conference the night before 60,000 protesters brought their demand for peace to a barricaded White House. Also in the studio were a Stanford University student and two United States Senators. The ABC network analysis was anchored by Howard K. Smith.

Known the previous two years as Journalism Week, originated by John R. Wilhelm, dean of the College of extremely valuable support of Ohio University's intercollegiate athletic program, a program the quality of which is unsurpassed . . . a program that has reflected a great credit upon this University."

A chief criticism of the task force's recommendations contended that the University pays $2 million of its $48 million annual budget for athletics, a figure the committee regarded as too much. Other administrative sources indicate that only about $750,000 is involved.

Offsetting the argument of the finances was a letter to the editor of the Athens Messenger on April 22 by Dr. Richard H. McFarland, professor of electrical engineering. He said although each of the departments would like to have the large athletic budget divided and passed around, "I maintain that the proper way to improve the financial status of a given department is not to destroy a successful department; but rather, to work to obtain resources through the use of our creative talents."

Scott Appointed Director Of Ohio Alumni Association

The appointment of J. David Scott as director of alumni affairs at Ohio University has been announced by Martin L. Hecht, vice president for development.

Scott, the assistant director of alumni affairs for the past year, succeeds William K. Loftus, who recently resigned to accept the position of director of development at Wheeling College.

As a member of the alumni and fund-raising staff headed by Jack Ellis, director of development, Scott assumes the responsibility of developing and maintaining the University's alumni programs and chapters throughout the nation.

He also will direct the planning for alumni activities such as class reunions, alumni homecoming participation, alumni day and Certificate of Merit recognitions. In addition, he will coordinate the chapter telefund campaigns and will assist in other alumni fund-raising programs.

Scott, a Lehman High School graduate, is an Ohio alumnus and former basketball star. He holds both a BS and MS in education and is a member of Phi Delta Kappa and Kappa Delta Pi.

Filmmaker Wins Recognition With 'Testimony' Document

A film by Ohio University graduate student Brian Patrick has gained major attention in several film festivals and was seen nationwide on National Educational Network (NET) in late May.

The film, Testimony, was completed by Patrick in December 1969. Already it has received an honorable mention at the Esquire Magazine Film Festival in February and will be the subject of an article in the August 1970 issue of Esquire.

Other credits for the film include a first-place award at the Ohio State Film Festival in April and selection for the international Oberhausen Film Festival in Germany in June.

Testimony is totally the work of Patrick, who produced, directed, photographed and edited the 17-minute film as an undergraduate thesis required for the bachelor of fine arts degree. The film student is now working for an MFA degree which he expects to complete in 1971.

Filmed in black and white, Testimony is a cinéma-vérité documentary of the Apostolic Lighthouse Church, a Pentecostal church located on the fringes of Appalachia in Athens. The film shows people giving testimony to their faith at street meetings and at a revival meeting at the church.

In addition to his own work, Patrick is currently editing the Ohio University alumni movie which is expected to be available on request after June 30. Patrick is from Avon Lake, Ohio.

Music Building Dedicated With Celebration Concert

The dedication of the new School of Music building at Ohio University April 26 was highlighted by the first of a group of musical events scheduled to celebrate the opening.

The Celebration Concert was conducted by Dr. Karl Ahrendt and featured "Alleluia for Chorus and Orchestra" and "The Lord Sun."

The concert was performed by the University Symphony Orchestra, Chorus, Singers and Percussion Ensemble.

The new music building was completed this year at a cost of $2.7 million. Features of the building include an electronic music laboratory for experimental composition, a learning laboratory for programmed studies in academic areas of music, classrooms, teaching studios and individual practice studios. A second phase of the building is planned, and it will provide an 800-seat concert hall, additional rehearsal space and instrument storage areas.

Director of the School of Music is Dr. Clyde Thompson.

Alumni Conduct Four Telefunds

Alumni volunteers conducted four telephone fund raising campaigns as pilot projects in April. Telefunds were conducted in Massachusetts by the Boston chapter, Hamilton County by the Cincinnati chapter, Stark County by the Canton chapter and in the Washington, D.C., area by the Washington chapter.

Through the efforts of the volunteers, alumni pledges in comparison with previous years were increased by 98 percent in Massachusetts, 200 percent in Hamilton County, 94 percent in Stark County and 120 percent in the D.C. area.

"It is encouraging to note these substantial increases within each chapter area," said Dave Scott, director of alumni affairs, "and we want to express our thanks to both the chapter alumni who donated their time in making the calls and to the many alumni who responded with their contributions."

As a result of this year's successful programs, the Alumni Association is anticipating expanding the Telefund activity into other areas next year.

Russell Co., a securities investment firm in Cleveland.

While attending Ohio University, Baumholtz was on the basketball team and was a member of Scabbard and Blade and Beta Theta Pi. His brother Frank is a member of the University's Athletic Hall of Fame.

Holmes New President Of Simmons College

Dr. William J. Holmes Jr., assistant to the president of Ohio University, has been named president of Simmons College in Boston.

Dr. Holmes, who will begin his term as fourth president of Simmons July 1, will succeed Dr. William E. Park.

The appointment makes Dr. Holmes the third official from Ohio University within the past year to become president of a college. The other two are Dr. Thomas S. Smith, Lawrence University, Appleton, Wis., and Dr. James Whalen, Newton College of the Sacred Heart, Newton, Mass.

The new Simmons president joined the English department at Ohio University in 1958 as director of remedial English. He also has directed the freshman and undergraduate English programs and the Ohio Fellows program, and he was acting director of the Honors College.

'45 Silver Reunion Set For October Weekend

The Class of 1945 will have its 25th reunion the weekend of Oct. 16, 17 and 18.

Scheduled events include a Friday evening cocktail party and reception, campus bus tours, a luncheon, the football game between Ohio and Miami, and an early evening cocktail party followed by dinner and dancing on Saturday.

Class members will receive further information and reservation materials in early September from the Alumni Association.

Richard Linke Establishes $30,000 Scholarship Fund

The Richard O. Linke Scholarship Fund has been established at Ohio University to provide financial assistance to students from the Colleges of Communication and Fine Arts.

The first presentation of the $1,500 award, made possible by Linke's contribution of $30,000, will be effective for the academic year beginning in September.

Linke, holder of the bachelor of science degree in journalism in 1941 and vice president of the University Alumni Association, is president of Richard O. Linke Associates, Inc., of Burbank, Calif. Regarded as one of the most successful TV film producers in the country, he serves as personal manager of such stars as Andy Griffith and Jim Nabors.

Choice of the recipient will be made by a selection committee consisting of John R. Wilhelm, dean of the College of Communication; Dr. Jack Morrison, dean of the College of Fine Arts; Michael M. L'Heureux, director of financial aids, and William H. Fenzel, professor emeritus of accounting and development consultant emeritus.

Linke, who last fall was named a director of the Andy Griffith Barbecue Co. with headquarters in Raleigh, N.C., also is vice president of the Lakeside Golf Club in North Hollywood. He is a member of the club's board of directors, is a former president of the Conference of Personal Managers, West, and currently is serving as executive producer of The Jim Nabors Hour on CBS-TV.

South Green Residence Halls: Unusual Living Experience

A new and unusual living experience will be provided at Ohio University next fall when the South Green residence hall complex opens.

The residence halls in the complex were built to individualize dormitory living and create an environment resembling that of a private home, according to Robert Hynes, director of housing.

A full 80 percent of the rooms in these housing units are singles with the remaining 20 percent standard doubles or "sleep-study" doubles. The "sleep-study" combination has the desks partitioned from the sleeping area.

Residence rooms are arranged in "modules" accommodating six persons. Each opens directly into a formal or informal lounge with no two the same and each having a private bath.

Three of the 15 new housing units are assigned to graduate students, and several others will be designated for special interest groups such as the Honors College, Ohio Fellows Program and the language houses.

All upperclass dormitories on the South Green will be coeducational and all present University social regulations will be enforced.

Three basic types of residence halls were constructed with the smallest housing 84 students and the largest accommodating 144. Each building in the complex will have one or more air-conditioned seminar rooms.

$50,000 Pledged By Ohio Seniors

More than $50,000 in pledges from Ohio University seniors has been reported by the 150 volunteer solicitors working on the 1970 Senior Class Challenge.

Personal solicitation of classmates by the seniors has resulted in 608 pledges to the drive and represents 25 percent participation.

The Class of 1970 chose library books and a loan fund as the purpose of the funds. The loan fund is to revolve for 15 years and at the end of that time become a scholarship fund for children of class members.

A record of $9,000 in pledges was secured in Cleveland where 125 seniors are student teaching. Working in teams of two to four, solicitors approached seniors at branch campuses in Zanesville, Lancaster, Portsmouth and Chillicothe.

Committees, Task Forces Present Reports to Sowle

President Claude R. Sowle has approved two recommendations by the Aviation Study Committee in action on one of several reports reaching him from University committees appointed earlier this year.

Other reports presented to the president were from the Community Relations Task Force, the Ad Hoc Railroad Committee and the special task force studying post-high school educational needs in southeastern Ohio.

The aviation committee recommendations approved by the president will allow the University to retain the aviation training program for students and offer a limited air transportation service.

Courses in ground and flight instruction will continue to be offered for academic credit and the air transportation service will involve one twin-engine aircraft, Sowle said.

Funding for the flight program during 1970-71 will be allocated from the University's operating reserve fund. A review of flight fees is being made by University administrators. Other recommendations by the committee are being considered by the vice president and dean of faculties and the director of administrative services.

University faculty, trustees, students, a city council representative and a member of the aviation industry were included on the committee chaired by Beaumont Davison, dean of the College of Engineering and Technology.

The report released by the Community Relations Task Force calls for action aimed at preventing and correcting causes of tension between Athens and Ohio University and its 18,000 students.

Recommendations call for intensive efforts by the University to alleviate students' frustrations caused by congested living conditions, lack of sufficient recreational facilities, internal bureaucracy and paternalistic social restrictions.

Suggestions made by the task force were for the acceptance of the "release on recognizance" provision in the courts, the appointment of a University ombudsman who would act as an advocate for students with the University and the establishment of an emergency small loan fund for students arrested on misdemeanor charges.

Establishment of a Citizens Advisory Committee to the University and inclusion of students on the Mayor's Advisory Committee were further steps suggested.

The task force report also recommended higher salaries, continued education, incentives for self-improvement through additional training and promotions based on training for Athens police.

The Ad Hoc Railroad Committee proposed a four-phase plan of action to remedy potential hazards caused by railroad tracks running through the campus.

The first step in the plan—fencing for the married students housing complex on Mill Street—has been completed.

The other phases include establishment of new or relocated pedestrian crossings with signals, overpass crossings and screening of the railroad for safety and noise control, and eventual relocation of the tracks.

Ohio's Birthday Party Plays In National Theater Festival

The Birthday Party, an Ohio University Theater production of a Harold Pinter play, was one of ten college and university productions recently presented at the second annual American College Theater Festival in Washington, D.C.

The play, directed by Rex McGraw of the theater faculty, starred Fred Miller of Clarksburg, W.Va.; Cynthia Mason, Avon, N.Y.; Bruce DuPre, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Cyril Mallett, VanEtten, N.Y.; Alan Tongret, Yorktown Heights, N.Y., and Rhonda Hopkins, Columbus.

The University production—performed May 1 and 2 in Ford's Theater—was one of 28 plays nominated to the national festival. Nearly 170 theater companies competed in the regional eliminations.

The national festival, held at Ford's Theater and the new University Center Theater of George Washington University, was presented by the Kennedy Center and The Smithsonian Institution and was sponsored by American Airlines.

The restoration of historic Ford's Theater where Lincoln was assassinated was completed last year and made available for festivals by the Department of the Interior.

The 1970 festival placed emphasis on the theater of the present and the theater of the future in contrast with last year's theme of classics in theater.

The theater companies of all the competing universities were guests of the festival in Washington for six days with all travel, housing and meal expenses paid.

Communication . . .

Communication, the special week-long program also recognized professional as well as student leaders in the fields of journalism, radio-television, speech and hearing, and interpersonal communication. Dr. Richard E. Ham, director of the School of Hearing and Speech Sciences, served as chairman of the program.

Alumni participation in this year's Communication Week program was reflected by the arrival in Athens of leaders from the Greater New York-New Jersey chapter of the University Alumni Association, as well as Cleveland alumni, to attend the Ohio University Associates dinner May 5. Representing the New York chapter was its president, Dr. Emil S. Kustin, '40, who presented the first of two Jesse Zousmer awards to Frank Barnes, radio-television senior from Tazewell, Va., for excellence in broadcasting.

Other out-of-town alumni attending the Associates dinner included Herbert Adler, '39, now of Cleveland but formerly of New York City, president of Bobbie Brooks, Inc.; Edward Sugar, '39, Daniel Cohen, '39, and Louis S. Cohen, '39, all of Cleveland; and Irving Block, '39, of New York. These men had been fraternity brothers and close friends of Jesse Zousmer.

Donald B. Moser, '57, senior editor of Life magazine, was in attendance to participate in the presentation of a Life photojournalism internship established by Time, Inc., and friends of photographer Paul Shutzer, who was on assignment for Life in the Sinai Desert when he was killed while covering the Arab-Israeli War.

All those attending the Associates dinner later went as a group to hear Gordon Parks, famed Life photographer and an artist in his own right in several other fields, who was the Communication Week speaker of the evening and the Alumni Association guest at dinner.

Receiving the Life award this first year in Shutzer's memory was Elliott Parker, graduate student from Kansas City, Kans., who will do a photographic essay on village life in Taiwan this summer.

A second Jesse Zousmer Award was made the following evening at the annual Radio-Television Awards banquet. The provision of two awards was made possible through the generosity of friends of Zousmer who contributed through the Alumni Association and the efforts of his own New York-New Jersey chapter. Both funds are still open.

Recipient of the second Zousmer Award, this one for excellence in broadcast news, was David Robinson, senior broadcast journalism major from Medina, Ohio, who has been news director of WOUB this year. Presenting the award was Elmer W. Lower, president of ABC News and long-time friend of Zousmer. Lower was another of the Communication Week speakers.

Jesse Zousmer, '36, had been vice president of ABC News and was working directly with Lower when he and his wife, the former Ruth Taylor, '38, were killed four years ago in a plane crash over Tokyo Bay when they were returning from a trip during which they had visited the war correspondents in Vietnam.

Besides Smith, Parks and Lower, other Communication Week speakers included the following: Mrs. Denny Griswold, editor and publisher of Public Relations News; Edward Bernays, founder of the public relations concept, who awarded a public relations fellowship being set up in his name; Larry Newman, freelance writer, publisher and former foreign correspondent; Arthur Moore, retiring director of McGraw-Hill World News; John Macy, president of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting; John S. Knight, editorial chairman of Knight Newspapers, Inc.; Dr. Lovenger Bowden, special assistant for urban affairs of the American Speech and Hearing Association, and Darrell T. Piersol, communication specialist for IBM.

Three of the Communication Week speakers—Smith, Knight and Parks—received the College of Communication's highest citation, the Carr Van Anda Award, set up to honor the memory of the long-time managing editor of the New York Times, who attended Ohio University from 1880 to 1882. He went on to become what journalism historians term "the greatest managing editor who ever lived."

Honor Awards were presented to Mrs. Griswold, Bernays, Newman, Moore, Macy and Piersol.

The Communication Week program of 11 major addresses included other activities, such as tours of the new Radio-Television Communication Building (situated between Baker Center and the Speech Building and connected to both), the unveiling of the Jesse Zousmer plaque in the same building by the New York-New Jersey chapter representatives, and many other auxiliary events. All these took place while the campus was teeming with genuinely concerned and peaceful demonstrators who expressed themselves on the issues of Cambodia and the Kent State shootings.

Many of the scheduled speeches took place in Memorial Auditorium, just alongside and well within hearing range of the demonstrators for whom the University had provided loudspeakers on the west portico during the first few days. The opening night discussions attracted persons numbering as high as 4,000. Throughout the week, although the rhetoric was often heated, the demonstrators were well-behaved. Later in the week, groups were encouraged to organize into smaller units to permit greater participation in discussions.

Communication Week guests, recognizing the concerns prevailing on the Athens campus and across the country, chose to relate their communication specialty to the situation. Whether the speaker was dealing with industrial, minority, interpersonal, print or electronic communication, he or she tended to relate to the current events.

In several cases, prepared texts were set aside, one speaker revising three times as the day and evening of her talk progressed. In all cases, additions were made to prepared texts and students were urged to ask questions after the speakers had concluded their addresses.

Suggestion by Dodgers' O'Malley Leads to Graduate Program in Sports Administration

by Charles Maher

About a dozen years ago, Walter O'Malley got to thinking that while the colleges were doing a pretty good job of training people for specialized jobs in commerce and industry, there was one field that had been entirely overlooked.

Sports had become a big business, O'Malley said to a friend, but the colleges offered no specialized training for a kid who might be interested in sports administration.

O'Malley's remark started some people thinking. And their thinking led, eventually, to the establishment of a graduate course in sports administration at Ohio University. It's the only one of its kind.

The course is directed by Dr. James G. Mason, 53-year-old chairman of the University's graduate program in physical education. In town on a visit, he was telling how the course got started.

Mason

"I took graduate work at Columbia," he said, "and the chairman of the P.E. department there, Clifford Brownell, was a friend of Walter O'Malley. He and Walter were chatting one day and Walter mentioned that the men who had come to the front in his organization were all college graduates, but that they had learned their jobs in baseball largely by trial and error. In school, there were no courses that would have taught them the skills needed in baseball administration."

Brownell mentioned O'Malley's thoughts to Mason, who was then with the P.E. department at the University of Miami in Coral Gables. Mason and several other educators had a meeting with O'Malley, and it was decided that they would draw up a sports administration curriculum which would include not only theory but practical training. The students would get their practical lessons at Vero Beach, Fla. They would go to spring training with the Dodgers.

"Mr. O'Malley was really enthusiastic about the program," Mason said, "but this was the year he moved the Dodgers from Brooklyn to Los Angeles. Now he had a stadium project and a lot of other things to think about. He just didn't have time to pursue the program."

No other sports people expressed any interest in the idea, but Mason decided a few years ago that maybe he could get the program started himself in his graduate school. He got the Graduate Council's approval and enrolled his first student in 1966-67.

Mason's program, like the one envisioned by O'Malley, includes internships. Students not only get classroom training (subjects include ethics and morality in business, government in business, advanced public relations, personnel management problems and broadcast programming) but spend several months working with sports organizations. Mason's students have interned, for example, with the Cincinnati Reds, Cleveland Browns, Detroit Pistons, Pro Football Hall of Fame and the Dodgers.

Fourteen students have completed the course and most have full-time jobs in sports. One, Herbert Anderson, started out in the Dodgers' minor league system and has since become general manager of the Pacific Coast League club at Salt Lake City.

"On the average," Mason said, "it takes two years to complete the course requirements. But a student with a bachelor's degree can't just come right into our program. He has to spend at least one quarter as a special student. If he has majored in P.E., he'll need some preliminary training in business. If he's majored in business, he'll need some preliminary training in P.E."

"We get hundreds of letters from Walter Mittys, people who like the idea of going into sports. But most of them are not willing to go through what we demand.

"Most of our students want to go into professional sports. But the program also offers training for people who want to be arena managers or go into college sports administration."

What Mason would like to do now is get baseball and football to put up some money for scholarships. "We're a state school," he said, "and the cost isn't too bad for a kid from Ohio. But it gets to be pretty expensive for out-of-state students."

"We'd like to get some scholarship money for blacks as well as whites. There are a lot of black players in pro sports, but there are darn few blacks in administration. I'm sure there are some kids, at schools like Grambling and Florida A&M, who aren't good enough to play professionally, but who would be qualified to get into sports administration."

There's just one question about Mason's program. You have to wonder how the general manager of a major league baseball club is going to react to a job application from a very bright young man who has just spent two years learning how to become general manager of a major league baseball club.

BOSTON: On March 19 the Massachusetts alumni chapter hosted a very successful reception for Massachusetts high school students who have been accepted at Ohio University. Jerry Reese, director of admissions; Dave Scott, '59, director of alumni affairs, and Alan Weinberg, '64, president of the Massachusetts chapter, spoke to the students and their parents.

On May 19, the wine tasting party of the chapter was again a delightful affair. The party is an annual event and commemorates the signing of the Ohio University Charter at the Bunch of Grapes Tavern in Boston.

GREATER NEW JERSEY: After several changes made necessary by the mail strike, Dr. Emil Kustin, '40, president of the New York/New Jersey chapter, organized a very successful reception in New York on March 20 for 550 students and parents. Speaking to the group were Dr. Kustin, Jerry Reese, Dave Scott, John Wilhelm, dean of the College of Communication; Mike Schott, Ohio football star, and Patricia Mondini, '67, a recent graduate who is living in the city. The Regency Ball Park was an ideal setting for the Greater New York/New Jersey chapter annual spring dinner dance.

AKRON: On April 9 the Akron Mothers' Club heard Dr. Russell Thomas of the College of Education discuss Ohio University's approach to academic and vocational counseling. Dr. Thomas provided some insights on ways in which parents could aid their children in making academic and vocational choices.

CINCINNATI: The annual dinner dance of the Cincinnati chapter was held at the Boone Arie Country Club in Florence, Ky., April 18. David Scott, director of alumni affairs, and his wife, Mary, were welcomed by the good turnout of alumni who enjoyed an evening of dining and dancing.

WASHINGTON, D.C.: The Washington chapter, with Tom Fess serving as program chairman, was host for an opening night theater party on May 1 at Ford's Theater when the Ohio University Theater Company presented The Birthday Party. Following the performance, alumni met with the cast and director, Dr. Rex McGraw, at a reception in the National Press Building.

CLEVELAND: On May 12 the Cleveland Mothers' Club made its annual contribution to the Ohio University Scholarship Fund. The Cleveland Mothers' have been very active again this year. Several bus loads of mothers from the Cleveland area participated in Mothers' Weekend May 1, 2 and 3 on the Athens campus.

LOS ANGELES: Southern California alumni met for their annual spring dinner-dance at the Newport Inn, Newport Beach, California, May 23, 1970. Guests from the Ohio University included President and Mrs. Claude R. Sowle, Director of Alumni Affairs and Mrs. David Scott, and Dr. and Mrs. William Holmes, assistant to the president. Chapter president, James Rissmiller was host for the evening program, which concluded with dancing and entertainment.

HOUSTON: President and Mrs. Claude R. Sowle were honored guests at the second annual alumni dinner on May 22, 1970. An enthusiastic band of Bobcats met to hear about recent developments on the University campus.

DETROIT: Marge Horn, '65, program chairman and Mrs. James Gibbs (Portia Earehart '64) planned a very fine dinner meeting honoring Coach Jim Snyder, '41, and two Bobcat basketball players from Michigan, Craig Lowe and John Canine. Coach Snyder reviewed the 1969-70 season and discussed next year's schedule.

ATLANTA: Georgia alumni welcomed Jack G. Ellis, '57, Ohio University director of development, and David Scott, '59, director of alumni affairs, at a dinner in Atlanta on May 9. Tom Jones, '64, is the president of the Atlanta chapter which has taken a very active interest in its Alma Mater.

HOMEcoming 1970: This year's Homecoming is scheduled for Oct. 9-11, and the Bobcats will play the University of Dayton in Peden Stadium Saturday, Oct. 10. The Homecoming weekend begins officially Friday, Oct. 9, with the Homecoming parade. Reservations for Athens models should be made early.

OHIO DEFENSIVE ENDS Larry Fields (86) and Fred Lewis (83) put the bookend squeeze on Kent State quarterback Steve Trusdior during last fall's 35-0 Bobcat victory. The Cats open their 1970 season Sept. 19 on Kent State turf. Spring drills ended on May 2 with the traditional Greeg and White game.

'Cats End Spring Workouts For 1970 Gridiron Season

Spring football practice at Ohio University April 3 through May 2 was the most important one in the past three years. Coach Bill Hess and his staff are faced with replacing some great football players who have graduated, notably, QB Cleve Bryant, SE Todd Snyder, LB Steve Robinson and TB Dave LeVeck, in addition to 16 other Bobcat lettermen.

"We will have to change our offensive and defensive thinking tailored around our returning personnel," Hess said. "However, at the important position of quarterback, Steve Skiver, who came on late last year and helped us win three of our last four games, is back again, and we have a lot of faith in him."

"But we'll need help from our freshman team more than at any time in the past three years. We have enough younger players returning that if we put them in the right spots, we can have a representative football team."

"But we will be moving personnel more than at almost any time in the past in an effort to find our best 11 both ways. We'll probably devote much more time to switching personnel this spring than at any time in the past. Our tactics will have to wait until we see just where our younger players fit into our plans."

Hess is counting heavily on 11 top sophomores in the line and eight sophomore backs.

As far as the MAC is concerned, Toledo looks like the clear-cut favorite, with Miami, Bowling Green, Kent State, Western Michigan and Ohio considered about even.

The Bobcat schedule will be similar to last year, with Dayton replacing Xavier. Ohio will travel to Penn State, Minnesota and Cincinnati for outside conference opponents.

The 1970 schedule (home games in caps) is as follows: Sept. 19 at Kent; Sept. 26 at Minnesota; Oct. 3, TOLEDO; Oct. 10, DAYTON (Homecoming); Oct. 17, MIAMI; Oct. 24 at Cincinnati; Oct. 31 at Western Michigan; Nov. 7 at Bowling Green; Nov. 14 at Penn State; and Nov. 21, MARSHALL (Dad's Weekend).

Wren's Men Win A Baker's Dozen

Coach Bob Wren's 22nd Ohio University baseball team got off to a good early start by chalking up 13 victories through their first 15 games, and the team leads the MAC with a perfect 6-0 slate at press time.

Included in the string was a no-hit game pitched by three different Ohio hurlers, Ed Robbins, six innings; Bill Toadwine, two innings; and Scotty Fields, one inning.

Meanwhile Ohio was racking up 13 runs on 14 hits over the hapless West Virginia Wesleyan team. Robbins fanned nine batters, Toadwine five and Fields three. Only an error and a walk prevented the performance from being a perfect game for Ohio.

Coach Kermit Blosser's linkers got off to a rather slow start, dropping five of their first eight matches. However, during this early period, Blosser was juggling his lineup and giving some of the younger players a chance to develop.

The tennis team went winless through its Southern swing but won its first match back up North, 7-2 over Wittenberg. Dave Coffey, assistant athletic business manager, is running the team while Coach Carroll Widdoes recovers from a winter bout with pneumonia.

Coach Stan Huntsman's track team was snouted out of a dual meet at Miami, but the track men were primed for the Ohio University Relays, 11th edition, April 10-11.

Cage Schedule Set for '70-71

Inaugurating a holiday tournament in Florida, two new opponents and three Big Ten games (two in Athens) highlight the Bobcats' 24-game basketball schedule for 1970-71.

The Bobcats, kingpins of the Mid-American Conference last season, will be in a field of four teams with Stetson University, Rollins College and Seton Hall for the first game of a new Tangerine Bowl Tournament in Orlando, Fla., Dec. 28 and 29.

New opponents on the card are Missouri at Columbia, Mo., Dec. 12 and Illinois State here Jan. 2.

Ohio opens the season at home against Big Ten member Northwestern, and Wisconsin is also here Dec. 15. Ohio is at Indiana Dec. 18.

Other non-league opponents to be met are Cincinnati here Jan. 26, at Virginia Tech Feb. 22, Loyola of Chicago there Feb. 8, Marshall home Feb. 16, at Ball State Feb. 20 and West Virginia Wesleyan here Dec. 11.

Final game on the schedule is March 6 at Bowling Green.

Bobcat Basketball Champions Break School, MAC Records

Ohio University's Mid-American Conference championship basketball team set seven individual records and three team marks en route to the school's best ever record of 20 wins and 5 losses.

Captain John Canine was drafted by the Phoenix Suns, and senior forward Greg McDivitt by the Suns and the Carolina Cougars.

Canine also was selected to play in four post-season all-star tournaments, including the attractive Aloha Classic in Honolulu. Both Canine and McDivitt played in the Sertoma Ohio and Indiana All-Star games April 17 in Columbus and April 18 in Indianapolis.

Bombarded out of the first round of the MidEast regional by Austin Carr's 61 points and Notre Dame's 112, the Bobcats drew a larger crowd than any previous team. The highest season home attendance of 81,504 was a new mark as was a per game home figure of 7,409.

The biggest crowd ever to watch an Ohio and Mid-American Conference game was in the stands, all 14,285 of them, as Ohio whipped Bowling Green 77-76.

Three Bobcats were picked on the first team All-MAC, another milestone, as Greg McDivitt, Craig Love and John Canine were named. Canine cracked the most career free throw standard with 175 of 229 for a .762 mark.

The highest career field goal percentage was rewritten by Dave Groll with 145 of 300 for .483.

Greg McDivitt cracked the most career personal foul record with 268.

Team marks that fell included the most points on a neutral floor (99) against Miami of Florida in the Hurricane Classic.

This Bobcat team was the most aggressive, as 586 personal fouls in one season set a new mark. It also tied the best home game record with a perfect 11-0 slate.

Canine's 1,149 points (264-, 414, 471) ranks him at fifth highest scorer in history, and McDivitt with 947 (240, 339-, 368) is ninth.

Canine's 471 points this season ranked as the fourth highest in a single season by any Bobcat.

"Our kids had great heart and gave great efforts all season," said Coach Jim Snyder, named Ohio College and Mid-American Conference Coach of the Year.

"We were naturally disappointed in the Notre Dame loss, but I can't fault our team effort," Snyder said.

Houska's Wrestlers Capture Conference Championship

Ohio's MAC wrestling champions had to win four out of five finals matches and have a fall to take the title while two Kent State grapplers had to lose, and it came out just that way.

"Bruce Hosta was the turning point," explained elated Coach Harry Houska. "He wrestled with a pinched nerve in his back and won the 167-pound title for us in a 3-2 overtime thriller."

Hosta, a Cleveland John Marshall graduate, couldn't work out all week because his back was bothering him. But he drew a bye in the first round, then dethroned George Graff of Miami 5-4 and beat Kent's Dave Herbert in the finals that ended 7-7 regulation and then 3-2 Hosta in overtime.

Eleven points down heading into the finals, Ohio needed the additional points of a fall and Bruce Trammell came through in that department. He pinned Bill Warren of Miami in 4:33 to win the 158-pound title. Trammell had been battling the flu prior to his match, as was Bill Saye.

Greg Voutyrs, Worthington frosh, also came through for the Bobcats with a second place in the 190-pound bracket.

Other weight classes were won by New Castle, Pa., freshman Rich Panella at 118 and Bridgeton, N.J., freshman Russ Johnson at 177.

Bob Tscholl, seeded first at 150, was sidelined with a clavicle separation two days earlier, and didn't wrestle at all. Kent's heavyweight Tom Walter lost in the finals to Toledo's Greg Wojciechowski, which helped the Ohio cause.

Ohio's Joe Zychowicz, Toledo sophomore, beat the reigning conference champ at 134 in the first round and then was dethroned in the second round to finish fourth.

Bob Mason, Parma sophomore, took a third place at 126, to give Ohio the remaining points.

"It was a great team effort," said Houska, "and our freshman did a terrific job. . . . Just think, they have shots at becoming four-time MAC winners."

Final point totals had Ohio 65; Kent State 64; Toledo 51; Bowling Green 44; Western Michigan 37; and Miami 33.
